

Museum Discovery Camp Week Four: Your Museum

Over the past three weeks, you have become a museum expert! You learned about the history of museums and about what makes a museum, a museum. You thought about how museums tell stories and practiced telling stories of your own. You visited a museum and documented how museums help their visitors understand the space and the collection. You've put everything you've learned about together to make a museum of your own - a museum with a theme, a story, and things that help your visitors enjoy their time in the museum. Congratulations!

Questions to think about...

What was your favorite part of creating your own museum?

What was something new you learned by creating your own museum?

What advice do you have for museums or people who want to create their own museums?

You could just think about your answers to these questions, share them with another person, write them down, or even include them in your museum!

Share your museum with us by tagging us
#GlencairnMuseumKids on social media, or emailing us
at info@glencairnmuseum.org

If you loved this process, check out this more detailed resource for making a museum that even includes marketing and having an opening event!

THINK & REFLECT

SHARE

